

Frequently Confused Words

It's perhaps the most common writing question: "your" or "you're"? "It's" or "its"? Hopefully, this handout will help.

Your/You're

- Your is used to indicate possession: "You'll shoot your eye out."
- You're is a contraction: it's the shortened form of "you are." "You never know what you're going to get in a box of chocolates."

There/Their/They're

- There is used as a pronoun: "There is no ice cream." "Over there, you'll find Australia."
- Their is used to indicate possession: "We're going to kidnap their dog and sell it on the Internet."
- They're is a contraction: it's the shortened form of "they are." "It's too late to hide; they're already here!"

It's/Its

- It's is a contraction, short for "it is." "A lie grows until it's as clear as your nose."
- Its is used to indicate possession: "The dog chased its tail!"

Affect/Effect

- Affect is a verb, meaning to change something. "Turning off the power to the city will affect people watching television."
- Effect is a noun, the result of some change. "The effect of turning off the power was that people could not watch television."

Who/Whom

- Who and whom basically mean the same thing. The trick is to know when to use them. This is a good rule of thumb: in the question you are asking, substitute another word for who/whom. If the words "he" or "she" work, then who is correct. If "him" or "her" sound better, then use whom. You may have to rephrase a sentence.
  - Example: "Whom did you dance with last night?" You can rephrase this sentence as "Did you dance with him last night?" In this case, whom is correct.
  - Example: "Who went to the movies last night?" You can rephrase this sentence as "Did she go to the movies last night?" In this case, who is correct.
