Hermen Diaz
GVSU Psychology major
President, Sigma Lambda Beta Fraternity
Building Manager, GVSU Kirkhof Center

“Professors actually get to know you here. They care enough to give you the support and encouragement you need to do your best.”

Hermen Diaz knew Grand Valley had a lot to offer him. Even so, he says his experience has been 10 times better than he ever anticipated. A big part of it has been the interest and encouragement shown by professors. Their support and accessibility have made it easier for Hermen to achieve his personal best. In addition, the opportunity to work as building manager of the university’s Kirkhof Center has helped him develop leadership and management skills that will give him an edge – in graduate school and beyond.

Grand Valley State University is preparing students like Hermen Diaz to be the next generation of leaders and innovators. It’s the kind of learning experience you’d expect from a small private college – with the programs, facilities, and resources only available from a major university. For more information, contact our Admissions Office at (800) 748-0246 or visit www.gvsu.edu.

- Offering more than 200 areas of academic study
- Classes taught by faculty, not teaching assistants
- Liberal education focus emphasizing critical thinking, creative problem solving, and cultural understanding
- Master’s level research opportunities for undergraduate students
- State-of-the-art learning, living, and research centers in Allendale and Grand Rapids