Grand Valley to celebrate fall semester graduates

Nearly 1,000 students will participate in the winter commencement ceremony December 9 at Van Andel Arena in downtown Grand Rapids.

The ceremony starts at 10 a.m. and will be webcast live at gvsu.edu/commencement.

Students will hear an address from Gayle R. Davis, who will receive an honorary degree. Davis served as Grand Valley's provost and executive vice president for Academic and Student Affairs from 2002 until her retirement in June.

During that time, Davis successfully aligned academic operations, programs and budgets as the university grew in size, complexity and reputation.

Davis is active in the West Michigan community. Her involvement includes the Greater Grand Rapids Women's History Council Board, the Board of Art and Museum Commissioners, and Goodwill Industries

Board of Directors. In 2009, she earned the Distinguished Woman in Leadership award from the Michigan ACE Women's Network.

Before her tenure at Grand Valley, Davis worked for Wichita State University, where she was a faculty member and chair of women's studies. She was appointed associate vice president for Academic Affairs and Research in 1994, and established the university's Center for Teaching and Research Excellence.

The Alumni Association will present the Young Alumni Award to Carolyn Ulstad, program assistant at Macatawa Area Coordinating Council.

Gayle R. Davis

She graduated in 2011 with a bachelor's degree in geography and planning and a minor in environmental science. In her role at MACC's Transportation Planning Department, she collaborates with area road commissions to rate road quality and supports the Macatawa Watershed Project.

New director of civic engagement named

Travus Burton has been named Grand Valley's director for civic learning and community engagement, a position housed in the Office of the Provost.

He will begin his new role January 9, replacing Ruth Stegeman, who retired in August.

Burton is currently the experiential learning coordinator for Oakland University's Office of Student Success and Experiential Learning Center.

Suzanne Benet, assistant vice president for Academic Affairs, said Burton brings prior experience and leadership skills necessary to move the university's civic action plan forward.

"The search committee was impressed with Travus' past work with faculty members and the support he garnered to develop community partnerships and assist faculty with designing experiential learning components of a course," Benet said.

Burton said he is honored to work at Grand Valley and said the university "values community engagement at the highest level."

"I am eager to begin exploring the possibilities for new collaborations, while building upon some of the great initiatives and plans already in motion," he said. "A major goal is to continue building a culture that values and utilizes community engagement in all aspects of the education we provide and the work we do at Grand Valley."

Prior to his position at Oakland University, Burton served as service learning coordinator for Central Michigan University's Center for Excellence in Teaching and Learning. He was president of the Isabella County Restoration House Board of Directors and instrumental in establishing the county's first shelter to address homelessness. Burton also worked as a HUD case manager for Capital Area Community Services in Lansing.

He is working toward a doctoral degree in education from CMU; Burton earned a bachelor's degree in communication and sociology from Saginaw Valley State University, and a master's degree in educational leadership from CMU.

A reception to welcome Burton to campus is planned for January 30, 4:30-6:30 p.m., at the Eberhard Center.

Career Center offers grants

The Career Center is accepting proposals from faculty and staff members for Internship Mini Grants (IMG).

These grants are intended to develop, grow, and/or enhance internship initiatives within academic departments; several examples are listed below.

- Develop an internship program for your academic area;
- Expand internship opportunities for students through employer development;
- Provide networking/recruiting opportunities for students.

Previous IMG recipients have used funding to create interactive websites, build employer connections, and organize internship panels/recruitment events. Funding can also be used to pay a student, faculty or staff member for time spent on internship initiatives.

The deadline to apply is December 7. Information and proposal submissions are online at gvsu.edu/careers/img.

Save the date: Faculty Awards Convocation

The annual Faculty Awards Convocation will be held February 1 at the DeVos Center, Loosemore Auditorium, beginning at 4 p.m.

Awards will be presented for faculty achievements as well as milestone awards for faculty members with 25 years of service or more. A reception will follow the ceremony; for more information, contact the Office of the Provost at x12400.

Diverse Visionary Award recipient

Grand Valley was a recipient of a Diversity Visionary Award from the Grand Rapids Area Chamber of Commerce.

The university was a four-star recipient in the large business/organization category, along with Herman Miller. Criteria for the award included measurements in five areas: leadership commitment, diverse talent, internal processes, diverse supply chain and community engagement.

Jesse Bernal, vice president for Inclusion and Equity, and Lynn Blue, vice president for Enrollment Development, accepted the award at the November 17 luncheon.

GVNow Recap:

Success of West Side dependent on collaboration, retaining talent

Community leaders emphasized inclusiveness, collaboration and developing talent as some of the keys to a successful future for Grand Rapids' West Side.

"West Side Story," was the topic of the Peter F. Secchia Breakfast Lecture November 29 at the L. William Seidman Center.

Speakers included Mike VanGessel, president of Rockford Construction; Ryan VerWys, president and CEO of Inner City Christian Federation; and Matt McLogan, vice president for University Relations at Grand Valley. Diana Lawson, dean of the Seidman College of Business, served as the moderator.

McLogan said the transformation of the West Side began when the Gerald R. Ford Museum and the Eberhard Center on the Pew Grand Rapids Campus were built. He said positive changes have continued in the area with the availability of affordable housing, jobs and entertainment, which attract millennials and provide a stable footprint.

"The future of the West Side will be driven by people," McLogan said. "That means developing and retaining talent. To be vibrant, we need to pay attention to millennials."

VanGessel, who grew up on the West Side, said investors have made a huge impact on the area, citing Meijer's Bridge Street Market as one example. The market is set to open at the corner of Bridge Street and Seward Avenue in fall 2018.

"We are now seeing the benefits of long-term relationships and collaboration," said VanGessel. "It's important to listen, work with integrity and be true to yourself."

He said the West Side is unique because it doesn't have defined architecture so there is great opportunity for density and height when it comes to construction.

WHAT'S AHEAD

Carillon tours, holiday concert planned for December

The Cook Carillon Tower is a focal point of the Allendale Campus, standing at 100 feet to the top of its spire and chiming every 15 minutes.

The campus community is invited to tour the structure, which was built and installed in 1994, on Tuesday, December 5, from 1:30-3 p.m.

Hosted by the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences and University Communications, the tours will be facilitated by Julianne Vanden Wyngaard, university carillonneur. Light refreshments will be served.

Vanden Wyngaard will also perform a holiday concert on the Beckering Family Carillon on December 24 from 9:30-10:15 p.m. The concert is free and open to the public.

Retirement celebration set for COE faculty

Three faculty members who are retiring from the College of Education will be recognized at a reception December 11.

A celebration to honor Sally Hipp, Lisabeth Margulus and Faite Mack will be held from 3:30-6:30 p.m. in the DeVos Center, Loosemore Auditorium. Formal remarks will begin at 5 p.m.

Faite Mack, professor of education and founding faculty member of the College of Education, came to Grand Valley in 1972. He established the graduate program in teacher education in 1975.

Mack was the first African American at Grand Valley promoted to the rank of full professor and the first faculty member to obtain a Fulbright Award. He was one of only 400 African Americans in the U.S. with a doctorate when he earned the degree in 1972 from the University of Illinois. Mack is one of six people who will earn 45-year service awards at

Margulus, associate professor of education, came to Grand Valley in 1999. She has served on several COE committees and was chair of the Education Leadership Department for 13 years.

Hipp, associate professor of education, came to Grand Valley in 2002 after spending 23 years as a teacher for Grand Rapids Public Schools. She served as program coordinator for Grand Valley's Graduate Teacher Certification program where she initiated partnerships with GRPS and encouraged her students to student teach in urban schools. Hipp was instrumental in moving the secondary GTC program to an online format.

Health care trends to be detailed at January event

Faculty members and expert panelists will provide a glimpse into health-related trends and issues that could affect the region at the ninth annual West Michigan Health Care Economic Forecast on January 12.

The Office of the Vice Provost for Health and Seidman College of Business Alumni Association will host the event at the Eberhard Center, beginning at 7:30 a.m. with a light breakfast; presentations will run from 8-9:30 a.m. The event is free and open to the public, RSVP online at gvsu.edu/vphealth.

Leslie Muller, assistant professor of economics, will team with Kevin Callison, assistant professor of global health management and policy at Tulane University, to present the Health Check Report, which details issues in Kent, Ottawa, Muskegon and Allegan counties. Callison served as assistant professor of economics at Grand Valley until last year.

Three local experts will then offer predictions about health care trends. Panelists are Dr. Peter Hahn, chief medical officer for Metro Health University of Michigan Health; Earle (Win) Irwin, board chair for Irwin Seating Holding Co.; and Nick Lyon, director of the Michigan Department of Health and Human Services.

FACULTY AND STAFF SKETCHES

IN THE NEWS

Retired professor dies

John Tevenbaugh, pioneer faculty member at Grand Valley, died November 15. He was 91.

Tevenbaugh, professor emeritus of history, was hired to work at Grand Valley in 1962 and retired as chair of the history department in 1988. He also taught at Muskegon Community College and was the author of six books and many articles about his research on early American history.

He served in the Army; after he was discharged in 1946, he enrolled at the University of Illinois and earned bachelor's, master's and doctoral degrees in history.

A celebration of Tevenbaugh's life will be held at a later date. Memorial contributions may be made to either Grand Valley or MCC.
