Curriculum & Course Development

2022 Screenprint & Relief (ART 263)
Working primarily with screenprint and block printing, students will gain skills in each, while also learning the historical context for these techniques. Experiences will include the production of hand-drawn and photographic screen stencils, carving both linoleum and wood blocks, mixing and modifying inks, and printing by hand and printing press.

Etching & Monotype (ART 264)

A hands-on overview of intaglio and planographic print processes. Working primarily with etching and monotype, students will gain skills in both, while also being presented with their historical context. Specific intaglio techniques to be covered include dry-point, hardground, soft-ground, and aquatint. Approaches to monotype will include painterly, subtractive, and trace.

Screenprint & Relief II: Mashups, Mutations, Multiples (ART 363)

Students will continue to explore stencil and relief printmaking processes, with particular focus on the ways in which materials and techniques can be combined, how prints can change formally and conceptually through their development, and how replicating an image can alter or enhance its meaning.

Etching & Monotype II: Mashups, Mutations, Multiples (ART 364)

Students continue to explore the potential of intaglio and planographic print processes, with particular focus on how combining, layering, replicating, or altering images through a series of steps can inform and enhance their meaning.

Print Media Mixed: Signs, Series, Stories (ART 465)

Students will explore intaglio, planographic, relief, and stencil processes with an emphasis on the development of personal content and craft. Students are expected to create original work within a self-determined thematic framework, working in series or suites of prints. Course focused on the relationship of the book as a form (aesthetics, formal potential, aesthetic functions) to the content chosen by each student.

2008      The Artist's Book (ART 380)

Course focused on the relationship of the book as a form (aesthetics, formal potential, aesthetic functions) to the content chosen by each student.

2004      Silkscreen (ART 380)

Developed course materials, including syllabus and readings, instructional handouts, and an image resource library. Responsible for acquisition and implementation of supplies (inks, photo emulsion, squeegees, screens, etc.)

Faculty Mentoring

As a tenured faculty I have directed significant time and energy toward preparing colleagues to teach courses new to them. This has involved discussing course objectives, sharing projects, resources, teaching strategies, samples of student work, and more.
