2018

A nationally-coordinated undergraduate data analysis competition

DataFest challenges and encourages students to find their own story to tell with the data – one they think will be meaningful to the data donor.

Join in for an opportunity to win prizes, meet other students who share an interest in data, and learn more about data science/statistics.

Students spend a weekend working in small teams, around the clock, for 48 hours (5pm Friday - 5pm Sunday), to find insight and meaning in a large and messy dataset rich with information.

Participants must register as a team of 2-5 individuals.

Registration deadline:
Friday, February 16th
