Study Abroad:

A study abroad experience of at least one semester is highly recommended. Research has shown that study abroad for at least one semester is necessary if students expect to reach an advanced level of oral proficiency. University foreign language majors who have not lived in a country where the language of study is a majority language tend to finish their degree with an intermediate high level of proficiency (Swender, 2001). See a Spanish advisor and www.gvsu.edu/studyabroad for more information.
