Information:

The COM 498 requirement provides you with an opportunity to complete advanced study in an area of personal interest. Generally students complete COM 498 during their final year of coursework.

You may work with a School of Communications faculty member and complete COM 498 requirements independently during any semester. To complete this option, you should first discuss your thesis/project ideas with a faculty member. Together, you will agree on the guidelines, expectations, and timelines for your project. The COM 498 independent option may be taken for 1-6 credits, depending on your catalog year, though 3 credits are most typical. Consult myPath and your advisor to find out how many credits are required for your thesis/project.
