

Course Offering Plan

Revised September 2018

This document describes the current plan for course offerings within the Department of Mathematics. All courses, and especially spring/summer courses, are subject to cancellation for a variety of factors such as low enrollment or lack of demand. Please consult with your advisor regularly to ensure that your plan of study is consistent with the department's planned offerings.

Courses offered every fall and winter semester: 097, 110, 122, 123, 124, 125, 201, 202, 203, 210, 221, 222, 225, 227, 302, 315, 325, 331, 350, 408, 495

Courses offered every spring / summer semester: 110, 122, 123, 124, 201, 202, 203, 225, 227, 315, 495

Courses offered regularly, but not every semester:

- (T): At least one section will be offered during twilight hours (4–6 p.m. start time).
- (E): At least one section will be offered during evening hours (6 p.m. or later start time).
- (TA): At least one section will be offered at times that do not conflict with teacher assisting.
- (ST): At least one section will be offered at times that do not conflict with student teaching. However, students and advisors are urged to plan programs that avoid the need to take a math class while student teaching or teacher assisting.
- All planned offerings are tentative and subject to cancellation due to low enrollment or lack of demand.
