NEW REGULATION ON FALL TERM EXAMS

We send you this announcement to inform you about the new regulation approved by the University Carlos III last year that guarantees the right of all non-European students to have an anticipated final exam before Christmas.

As you know, the final exams of our First Semester at Universidad Carlos III take place every year during the second and third week of January. This finals exams calendar implies, in most cases, an overlapping of the exam dates with the beginning of the First Semester at your University.

To overcome this problem and avoid having your students taking exams while already started the semester at home, the University has approved a new regulation that establishes the right for all Non European students to take an anticipated exam every year during the third week of December (approximately from December 15th to December 19th) so they don't need to come back for final exams after Christmas or take distance exams.

Every year, students should check with the professor of each specific course in which they are enrolled, to confirm the exact date, time and classroom for their anticipated exam.

Please note that this new regulation is applicable as of Fall Semester of 14/15, which implies that distance exams will not be available anymore.

We hope this new regulation reduces the level of stress and uncertainty among international students and, hopefully will allow you to increase the number of students sent to Carlos III in our Fall Semester.

We also allow us to send a pdf document with links in order to better promote our university.

Thank you very much for your wonderful help and great cooperation.
