Ken Riley is a talented student, organizer, and athlete who is making the most of his college years. He's completing an innovative and challenging degree from Grand Valley State University's School of Health Professions that will take him back to Chicago to give underserved people with physical challenges a better life. Ken has also helped start and manage a student organization devoted to cancer awareness and education, and he works on a national level with the American Cancer Society. In his spare time, Ken pole vaults on the university track team and serves as a resident assistant in one of Grand Valley's student living centers.

Grand Valley is preparing exceptional students like Ken to become tomorrow's leaders and innovators. Our outstanding academic programs, accomplished professors, and world-class learning and living centers make Grand Valley a destination point for high-achieving students. It's the kind of learning experience you'd expect from a small private college -- with the programs, facilities, and resources only available from a major university. For more information, contact our Admissions Office at (616) 331-2025 or visit www.gvsu.edu.

- Offering more than 200 areas of academic study
- All classes taught by faculty, not teaching assistants
- Liberal arts focus emphasizing critical thinking and creative problem solving
- Master's level research opportunities for undergraduate students
- State-of-the-art learning, living, and research centers

Ken Riley
Therapeutic Recreation major
Hazel Crest, Illinois

"It's true you get out of college what you put in. But Grand Valley has given me learning and leadership opportunities I wouldn't have had anywhere else."

Grand Valley State University
(616) 331-2025  www.gvsu.edu